The announcement comes after Microsoft on Friday defeated a last-ditch effort by the US Federal Trade Commission to scuttle the 💸 company's $68.7 billion purchase of Activision Blizzard. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals declined to grant the regulator an emergency stay 💸 of a ruling that allows the deal to proceed in the US. The United Kingdom's Markets and Competition Authority (CMA) 💸 is the last remaining regulator of note opposed to the purchase, but the watchdog and Microsoft recently agreed to put 💸 their legal battle over the deal on hold and negotiate a compromise.
We are pleased to announce that Microsoft and @PlayStation 💸 have signed a binding agreement to keep Call of Duty on PlayStation following the acquisition of Activision Blizzard. We look 💸 forward to a future where players globally have more choice to play their favorite games. Phil Spencer (@XboxP3) July 💸 16, 2024
"From Day One of this acquisition, we 💸 ve been committed to addressing the concerns of regulators, platform and game developers, 💸 and consumers," Microsoft President and Vice Chair Brad Smith tweeted in response to Spencer's post. "Even after we cross the 💸 finish line for this deal 💸 s approval, we will remain focused on ensuring that Call of Duty remains available on more 💸 platforms and for more consumers than ever before."
Spencer did not disclose the terms of Microsoft's deal with Sony, though Stephen 💸 Totilo of Axios later confirmed that it is 10 years in duration. Microsoft first offered Sony a 10-year deal to 💸 keep Call of Duty on current and future PlayStation consoles at the end of last year, though the Japanese electronics 💸 giant turned down the olive branch at the time. In an effort to secure approval from regulators, including the FTC 💸 and CMA, Microsoft went on to sign an agreement with Nintendo to bring the series to the company's future consoles. 💸 It also came to terms with cloud gaming providers like NVIDIA.
